Message from the Archbishops of Armagh: 'A time for re-kindling …'

These few days at the turn of the year offer an opportunity for people who are normally very busy to give worthwhile time to family and friends. It can also be a stressful and difficult time for people who feel estranged from friends and loved ones to whom they were once close, and for those who feel they have no-one they can truly call a friend.

Over Christmas and New Year many people are able to rekindle relationships that have somehow gone sour. We are all capable of bringing light and love into another person's life - perhaps someone for whom hope itself is fading, someone who desperately needs the rekindling of trust that only care and friendship can bring. Jesus Christ came into the world to bring us not only the light of his love but also the warmth of his friendship. Indeed, he assured his disciples that they were more than just "followers"; they were his "friends" (John 15.15).

Our country, north and south, truly needs the rekindling of wholesome relationships - socially and politically, nationally and internationally - and our prayer is that men and women of integrity will find the generosity and courage they need to lead and take the initiative in making these crucial relationships work.

We pray as one that 2020 may be a year of rekindling true friendship for all the people of Ireland.
