World Communications Day is celebrated on Sunday 16th May – the Solemnity of the Ascension of the Lord. In his message for World Communications Day, Pope Francis says Jesus' invitation to "Come and see" is the way by which the Christian faith is communicated.
"This year, I would like to devote this Message to the invitation to 'come and see', which can serve as an inspiration for all communication that strives to be clear and honest, in the press, on the internet, in the Church's daily preaching and in political or social communication."

Pope Francis also notes the importance of modern means of communication, especially the internet. "The internet, with its countless social media expressions, can increase the capacity for reporting and sharing, with many more eyes on the world and a constant flood of images and testimonies." It allows many more people to share their stories, and to be witnesses of what they see and hear.

At the same time, however, Pope Francis warns of "the risk of misinformation being spread on social media," which has now "become evident to everyone." The internet is "a powerful tool" the Pope says, which requires of us, both as producers and consumers of information, a great deal of prudence and responsible care for how we use it. "All of us are responsible for the communications we make, for the information we share, for the control that we can exert over fake news by exposing it," he says. "All of us are to be witnesses of the truth: to go, to see and to share."
